Death of a good Man We find in the Southern (Ga.) Banner the subjoined touching notice of the death of the venerable John A. Cobb, father of the Hon Howell Cobb, of the House of Representa

OBITUARY .- Died, in Athens, on Wednesday, November 21, 1855, Col. John A. Cobs, in the 73d year of his age.

Fulsom adulation in obituary notices has Gazette menti-ecome so common that we almost shrink of his death: from recording the virtues of our friends lest we tax the credulity of readers. To those who knew the deceased, the following summary of his character will not be deemed overdrawn:

He was a gentleman. Though not bred in palaces or parlors, neither palaces nor parlors could teach him politeness. On his death bed this striking trait in his character was exhibited on several occasions.

He was a patriot. Though devotedly attached to his political party, he was more devoted to his country; and, on two occasions during his life, he changed his immediate party associations when the Government of his country he believed to be in jeopardy.

He was a good citizen. His public spirit, in the days of his manhood and prosperity, will be attested by those who were then associated with

He was a kind neighbor-a firm friend. His purse; his friendship no end but that of his benevolence knew no limit but that of his The rich who dealt with him acknowl edge his liberality; the poor bear grateful re-collections of his kindness, his forbearance; and his justice. His charity extended to every fault of every erring man. No word of harsh-ness or severe criticism ever passed his lips, and he rebuked such indulgence in his children and friends.

As a husband and a father, his only foible was excess of tenderness and yielding love. As a master, mercy and justice ruled his life. He was, more than all, a Christian-an humble, unobtrusive, devoted Christian. For many years before his death, his chief delight was in religious service, and in the conversation of pious friends. Though constitutionally fearful of the struggle at the dissolution, yet Christian grace enabled him to conquer the last enemy, and to welcome him as a friend. For weeks he looked death in the face, and his eye never quailed, nor was his faith shaken.

A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch, writing from Norfolk under date of the 12th December, says:

"There is a great deal of activity in the navy yard at present. From fourteen to fif-teen hundred pairs of hands are daily plying their tools either in the construction and re-pairs of ships, or in the proper equipment and repair of the yard as a dock and naval depot. To keep this work going on vigorously and spiritedly, the Government has to pay out in gold and silver about fifty thousand dollars per month, which affords some relief to the com-mercial stupor in which the fever left the two the stocks, monuments in strength and beauty, to the constructive skill of Constructor Samuel Hart. The Roanoke will be launched to-morrow, which will be quite a gala day in the yard and in the town. After the launch the remaining portion of the day is given as a holiday to the employees, who enjoy it to their heart's con-tent, over turkey roasts and bivalves in every style, washed down with a liquid which is contraband of peace in Maine. Hunted by an Assassin. According to a correspondent of the Lynchburg Republican, a citizen of Smythe county, George W. Richardson, by name, has for several years past been pursued by a malignant and unknown foe, with the view, apparently, of murder, but for what object is a complete mystery. He has been assailed with rocks, fired upon, beaten with a club and stabbed, during the hours of darkness; and yet he has escaped with his life, although at times badly injured personally. Last summer, his barn was set on fire and his crops destroyed, probable his transfer and his crops destroyed, probable his second and the second se ably by the same mysterious enemy, and re-cently a package was sent to Mr. R., which was found to contain a large apple; but he forebore to taste until he had examined it, and well for him was it that he did so-for the apple was thoroughly poisoned with arsenic. During the last month, while Mr. R., was visiting a relative in Marion, a negro left word for him that his aunt was lying dangerously ill some three miles distant. He immediately repaired to the place, and found his aunt perfectly well. Con-cluding that there was a plan to way-lay him on his return, he determined to remain where he was. During the night he lay down to sleep near a window, but was soon afterwards awakened by the report of a pistol, and a smart sensation of pain in his face and head. It was soon discovered that he had been fired upon through a broken glass in the window, and that all had barely grazed the skin of his head and lodged in the pillow. This last outrage has so greatly aroused the indignation of the citizens of Smythe, that every conceivable effort will now be made to discover the fiendish author of these foul designs. This is certainly the most remarkable instance of persevering villainy and miraculous preservation from death that we ever heard of

Death of Another American in Russia. Dr. Charles A. Deninger, of Reading, Pennsylvania, recently died of Cholera in the Crimea. He was a surgeon in the Russian service, and a young man of fine promise. The Reading Gazette mentions the following brief incidents

"He had made an appointment to spend an evening with his comrade, Dr. Jones, of Balti-more; went, and found him prostrated with a sudden and violent attack of cholera. He re-mained with him all night, and rendered him every assistance that professional knowledge and friendly interest could suggest, but notwithstanding all he sunk rapidly and died. Very soon after Dr. Deininger was himself seized with the same terrible malady, and in spite of all the efforts of his brother surgeons, e, too, died, after an illness of only eleven hours. He retained full possession of his faculties until the last, awaited death with Christian composure, and breathed but a single regret, which was for the loved ones in his far-off nome, whose grief the tidings of his departure would occasion he could well imagine. His body was deposited in the same grave with that of Dr. Jones, and the funeral services were performed by a clergyman of the German Lutheran Church, of which Dr. Deininger was a baptised member.

EXTRAORDINARY DISCOVERY - ENORMOUS SNAKE—More than four months since, the Seringapatam arrived at this port from Aus-tralia, consigned to Messrs. Milesis and Kington. A portion of the cargo consisted of several tons of woolen rags, packed in bales, by hydraulic pressure, which were housed at Bald-win street Hall, the warehouse of Messrs. James Bush & Co. Yesterday, in unpacking one of these bales, the workmen were suddenly alarmed by a strange hissing noise, and upon examining as to the cause, a huge snake, fully five feet in length, sprang out of the bale, and made its escape among other goods in the warehouse. As it has not yet been captured, of course we are unable to state anything as to the species, but from the fact of the Seringapatam having left the shores of Australia more than seven months ago, this is another and strange instance of the tenacity of reptile life under the most strange and apparently im-possible circumstances.—[Bristol (Eng.) Keeping Grapes in Winter.

I have packed grapes in various ways—in cotton batting, in cotton wadding, with the stems tied with twine, and with paper between layers—and have arrived at the conclusion that none of these things are necessary, unless the grapes are put into tight boxes. If so packed, there must be some dry substance to absorb the moisture, (always passing off more or less until the fruit becomes perfectly dry,) otherwise it will mildew and rot the grapes. The fruit keeps the best, I think, to let it hang on the vines as late as it can and not freeze— pick in a dry day, place it in shallow boxes, not more than two clusters deep; keep it in as cool a place as you can, and not let it freeze, and where there is sufficient circulation of air to carry off the moisture. I have kept them in this way until April, and though towards the last they were indented like raisins, they still retained their delicious flavor.

Daniel Webster's Marriage. The manner of Daniel Webster's engagement to Miss Fletcher, is thus pleasantly dis covered by a letter writer:

"He was then a young lawyer in Portsmouth, N. H. At one of his visits to Miss Grace Fletcher he had, probably with a view of utility and enjoyment, been holding a skein of silk thread for her, when suddenly he stopped, saying, 'Grace' we have thus been engaged in untying knots; let us see if we can tie a knot, one of which will not untie for a life-time.' He then took a piece of tape, and after beginning a knot of a peculiar kind, gave it to her to complete. This was the ceremony and ratification of their engagement. And now in the little box marked by him with the words 'Precious Documents,' containing the letters of his early courtship, this unique memorial is still to be found—the knot never untied."

The annual statement of the trade and nmerce of Cincinnati show to good advantage the resources, trade and-commerce of this great city of the Ohio valley. The annual value of its manufacturies is $52,109,374. Its imports annually are valued at $75,000,000. There are 6,000 miles of railway now diverging from the city, and 4,000 miles under construc-

THE GLOBE:

The Official Organ of Congress and Newspaper for the People. I address my annual circular to the public, apprising it that the Globe will renew its reports of the Congressional Debates at the next session of Congress. It is hardly necessary to say that the proceedings of the next Congress will be of vast been recognized by the faculty, but the great disadvantage arising from its nauseous taste has hitherto prevented its administration in many diseases for which it is particularly adapted. The usual "modus operand?" of prescribing it, either in the form of an Emulsion or Gelatinous Capsules, has not been found satisfactory, being liable to some objection, either from the difficulty experienced by some individuals in the deglutition of the Capsule or the small quantity of Copaiba generally found in the Emulsion.

Joyce's tasteless solution of Copaiba is the most unique preparation yet introduced to the medical profession, as it contains 50 per cent. of the purest Para Copaiba, without taste or smell, and at same time mixes clearly and freely with water, and is pronounced by the most eminent physicians and analytical chemists in the old and new worlds to contain all the medicinal properties of Balsam Copaiba without its disagreable characteristics. import to the country. The issues which have been made in relation to slavery, connected with the great interest which is always taken in Con-gress in relation to the nomination of presidential candidates, will give intense excitement to the candidates, will give intense excitement to the next session, which will be communicated to the public. Whatever is debated in Congress will be debated everywhere. The importance of official reports cannot, therefore, be too highly e-timated. The country will pass upon the proceedings of Congress as they progress, and public opinion, if properly informed, will have a salutary influence that the results.

The Daily Globs will be printed on a double royal sheet at eleven o'clock every morning, except Sunday, and will contain all the messages of the President of the United States; the reports of the Executive Departments; the entire proceedings of Congress; the laws passed during the session; and the news by telegraph and from other sources up to the hour of going to press. The debates in Congress frequently fill thirty, forty, fifty, and sometimes more than a hundred columns a day. Whenever they make more than twenty-eight columns a day, extra sheets are printed.

Tuesday's Congressional Globe will be published every Tuesday morning, and contain the proceedings of Congress in a condensed form; the current news of the day, and such editorial comment upon the times as may be deemed suitable to the character of the paper. When the debates of a week cannot be condensed into twenty columns, and leave eight columns of the sheet or other matter and advertisements, an extra sheet will be printed.

If a subscriber shall lose any numbers, they will be supplied at the rate of three cents for sixteen pages.

It is admitted by every competent judge, whose opinion I have heard expressed on the subject, that the debates of Congress are better reported, and sold lower than those of any other legislative body. A calculation which I made for the Senate of the United States in April, 1854, shows that Congress pays me for reporting and publishing its debates in the Daily Globe, and then in the Congressional Globe and Appendix, only one

Congress pays me for reporting and publishing its debates in the Daily Globe, and then in the Congressional Globe and Appendix, only one eleventh the rate charged in England for publishing the debates of Parliament, and about one seventh the average rate paid by the States of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Kentucky, (which are all the States in which the prices paid had then been ascertained.) for publishing their debates in book form only. The debates of Congress are offered to subscribers, in this Prospectus, for about one half the price paid for them by Congress—the expense of reporting, and then publishing them in the Daily Globe to enable members to revise their remarks for the Congressional Globe and Appendix, are all paid for by Congress, and do not form any part of the $6 which an individual pays for them. Calculations showing the prices paid for debates are printed on the fourth page of the paper.

To facilitate the circulation of the Congressional Globe and cheapen it to subscribers, Congress passed a joint resolutiou making it free of postage. I annex it, as the law may not be accessible to postmasters generally:
